KOCHAVIAH 1985

Students struggling to understand a text, learning skills which will carry them through years to come . . . A desk piled high with syllabi, course schedules, CORE listings, etc . . . A passing comment in class which surprises students, once again indicating a wide scope of knowledge and understanding . . . "Come in" through a door always open to students . . . The development and implementation of the CORE program . . . A patient listener offering coffee and insights, ready to help sort out a problem . . . A phone constantly ringing . . . Searching for a new instructor or course to further challenge the students . . . Dancing eyes and a quick smile when making a point in class . . . Images of Rabbi Berman.

We the senior class of 1985, dedicate Kochaviah 1985 to Rabbi Saul Berman. Few people are as committed to women's Jewish education as Rabbi Berman, and even fewer have done as much to better the quality of that education. His constant devotion to the women of Stern College has gained him our respect, love, and admiration. Thank you, Rabbi Berman.

In September of 1954, Stern College opened its doors to twenty-eight girls who would become the guides for every future class. Over the next four years, they would lay the foundation of our school and pursue areas previously unexplored. In his address to the 1958 graduating class, Dr. Samuel Belkin wrote: "Just a few years ago the seed of a momentous idea was planted — the idea of creating a liberal arts college under Jewish sponsorship to give to young Jewish women everywhere an education in the precious traditions and principles of Judaism, as well as in academic subjects."

Over the past twenty-seven years, this "momentous idea" has sprouted from seed to fruit. From the day of its inception, Stern College has grown and developed into a school which enhances the life of a Jewish woman while allowing her to grow academically and religiously.

In 1954, the college consisted of twenty-five classrooms, an auditorium and limited facilities. The science labs were only in the early stages of construction, and there was no official dormitory; instead, the girls occupied several floors in various local hotels. The program of courses offered at Stern covered merely the basic areas of study, as there were only twenty-nine members on the teaching staff. Tuition was only $780 for the entire school year. Highlights of the earlier years included the visit of Eleanor Roosevelt for a fireside chat with the 1957 senior class.

Over the years, the student body grew to such proportions that a new school building was necessary; in 1968, the student body threatened a strike in order to obtain a new building. On March 26, 1969, a groundbreaking ceremony was held for the present eleven story classroom administration building at 245 Lexington Avenue. Along with enrollment, the breadth of academic offerings expanded steadily, as students prepared to take their places in a variety of professions and vocations.

However, expansion extended to other areas as well, for, as Dr. Belkin stated, "The function of a college is to discover the individual's capacity for growth, to bring out one's abilities and aid in realizing them to the full. This involves more than developing a mechanical aptitude to fill a job. It goes beyond mere memorization of facts. It involves development of a mature understanding, the development of heart and mind, the adoption of an ethic, a set of values on which to pattern one's life."

Taking Dr. Belkin's words to heart, students sought to broaden their concerns and apply their values in settings as divergent as Stern College affairs and the realm of foreign relations. In 1971, for example, the Stern College Senate was established to facilitate student participation in university governance together with administration and faculty. The years were filled with picketing, as when, concerned over national policy, the student body joined in the Vietnam moratorium and in protests against American involvement in Cambodia. Students also became aware of the plight of Soviet Jews and rallied in Foley Square.

"Learn from yesterday, live for today, believe in tomorrow . . ."

Today, Stern College remains committed, and continues to be characterized by steady growth. As befits a school whose faculty has grown from an original twenty-nine members to approximately one hundred and twenty-five, the Stern of 1985 offers its students a much wider array of majors. Whereas the 1958 graduating class of twenty-six was dominated by Education majors followed closely by English and Psychology majors, the 1984 class of one hundred and thirty girls was far more varied. In addition to the traditional favorites, this class included a healthy representation in majors once rare on the campus of a women's college, such as Economics, Accounting, Computer Science, and the innovative "shaped major".

Renovations are constantly being made both in the school building and in the dormitory. The cafeteria, the study halls, and the dormitory lounge have all been redecorated. A new student lounge in the school building was dedicated in February 1985. Of course, tuition has managed to keep pace with Stern's dynamic growth, jumping from 1958's $780 to 1985's $6,230.

Through it all, Stern has remained true to its intended purpose. As a 1979 press release declared, "Stern College has vindicated the vision of its founding fathers and remains a growing, ever developing institution for Jewish and secular education." Thanks to the efforts of our predecessors, and goals which they strove to realize, our graduating class can be, in turn, a guide for future classes. Just as the girls of 1958 wrote in their yearbook, we too, "look toward the future with our spirits high". We, the graduates of 1985, will do our best to continue the chain begun twenty-seven years ago.

I ♥ NY

Yeshiva University / Office of the President

TO THE STERN COLLEGE CLASS OF 1985:

My congratulations to you are enhanced by the fact that you are being graduated as the last class of the first century of Yeshiva University's existence.

As such, you carry with you a significant and sacred "baggage" of history, Torah, culture, and communal experience and aspiration. Our founders were in touch with the vital and historic Jewry of Eastern Europe and, through them, with the entire, unbroken chain of Jewish history and tradition. During the last hundred years, Yeshiva has succeeded in extending that sacred chain in a new, radically different environment — that of the modern age and the democratic, pluralistic, technological society of America. And Stern College for Women represents one of the latest and most significant links in the chain: More than a quarter century of woman's high education in all realms and disciplines, including and especially Torah.

With the awareness of such distinguished contributions, I know you will proceed to build your families, careers, and communities on the highest levels of achievement and according to the most exacting standards.

Good luck!

Cordially yours,

NORMAN LAMM
President

OFFICE OF THE DEAN

Dear Graduates,

On behalf of the faculty and staff of Stern College for Women I extend enthusiastic congratulations to you.

The years you have spent at the college have been a time of growth for all of us. As you have chosen courses and majors, the faculty and administration have responded by expanding departments and developing new career tracks. As you have struggled to define and refine your goals, we have deliberated the basic components of our unique educational mission. Together we have built a stronger Stern College, and you leave now having gained a truly remarkable education.

In the years ahead you will inevitably face certain conflicts, for the challenges facing the woman who has been educated both generally and Jewishly are enormous. On the one hand, you have the ability to compete successfully in the world of work. On the other hand, you have accepted the Jewish imperative to build a home, raise a family, and thereby ensure Jewish survival. You have also been nourished by the daily study of Torah, and for many of you that study will continue even as you leave us now.

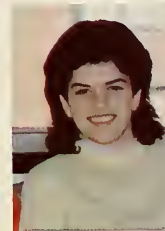

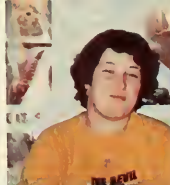

I am confident you will set your future priorities based on the values you have internalized at Stern College. With such a course, I know you will view the future as filled with opportunities rather than frustrations.

May you go from strength to strength in all your undertakings.

Sincerely,

Karen Bacon

OFFICE OF THE DEAN

It is with great pleasure and a deep sense of pride that I wish you mazal tov upon your graduation from Stern College. The educational process in our college may be described as symbiotic. We teach, instruct and guide, but we cherish above all the responsiveness, participation and growth of our students.

The credo of Stern College, which I trust you will bring to bear in all your future endeavors, is Torah U-mada. As a parting message, let me offer a formulation of R. Israel Salanter and others concerning the dual aspects inherent in the precept of Torah study. This mizvah contains two components: The first is Limmud ha-Torah, the act of dedicated study, of simply devoting time and effort to learn. Even if one does not achieve full comprehension of the material under scrutiny, he or she has fulfilled this dimension of Torah study by virtue of having made the effort and put in the time.

At the same time, one must strive for Yedi'at ha-Torah, for a comprehensive intellectual and spiritual mastery of the subject matter at hand. Yedi'at ha-Torah is inextricably linked with the development of yirat-ha-Shem, of true reverence for God and for His Torah. We hope that you have acquired the desire and the discipline during your stay at Stern College, to undertake Limmud-ha-Torah on your own or with others as often as possible. You have been afforded the methodological tools, the breadth of knowledge and the ability to translate these dimensions into a formula for the creation of personal and societal ethics, all of which are necessary in order to achieve true Yedi'at ha-Torah.

Each one of you brings to this world unique qualities and talents which can enhance your life and the lives of others. It is up to you to use them wisely. May you continue to be a source of pride to your alma mater, your families and Klal Yisrael.

Sincerely yours,

Rabbi Ephraim Kanarfogel

OFFICE OF STUDENT SERVICES

To The Stern College Class Of 1985:

It is a privilege to extend my best wishes of Mazel Tov to the Stern College graduating class of 1985. For the last quarter of a century I have seen classes of aspiring, young women enter and leave. As the college grew and developed with its expanded offerings both in Jewish Studies and in the Arts and Sciences, so has our student body grown both quantitatively. While these curricula remain the foundations and core of our academic structure, we have not been oblivious to the need for our students to be prepared to enter the job market in the fields of accounting, computers, engineering, nursing and occupational therapy. Thus, we are striving to educate our young women along the idealistic lines of Torah learning and observance and at the same time to contribute to the practical aspects of our society.

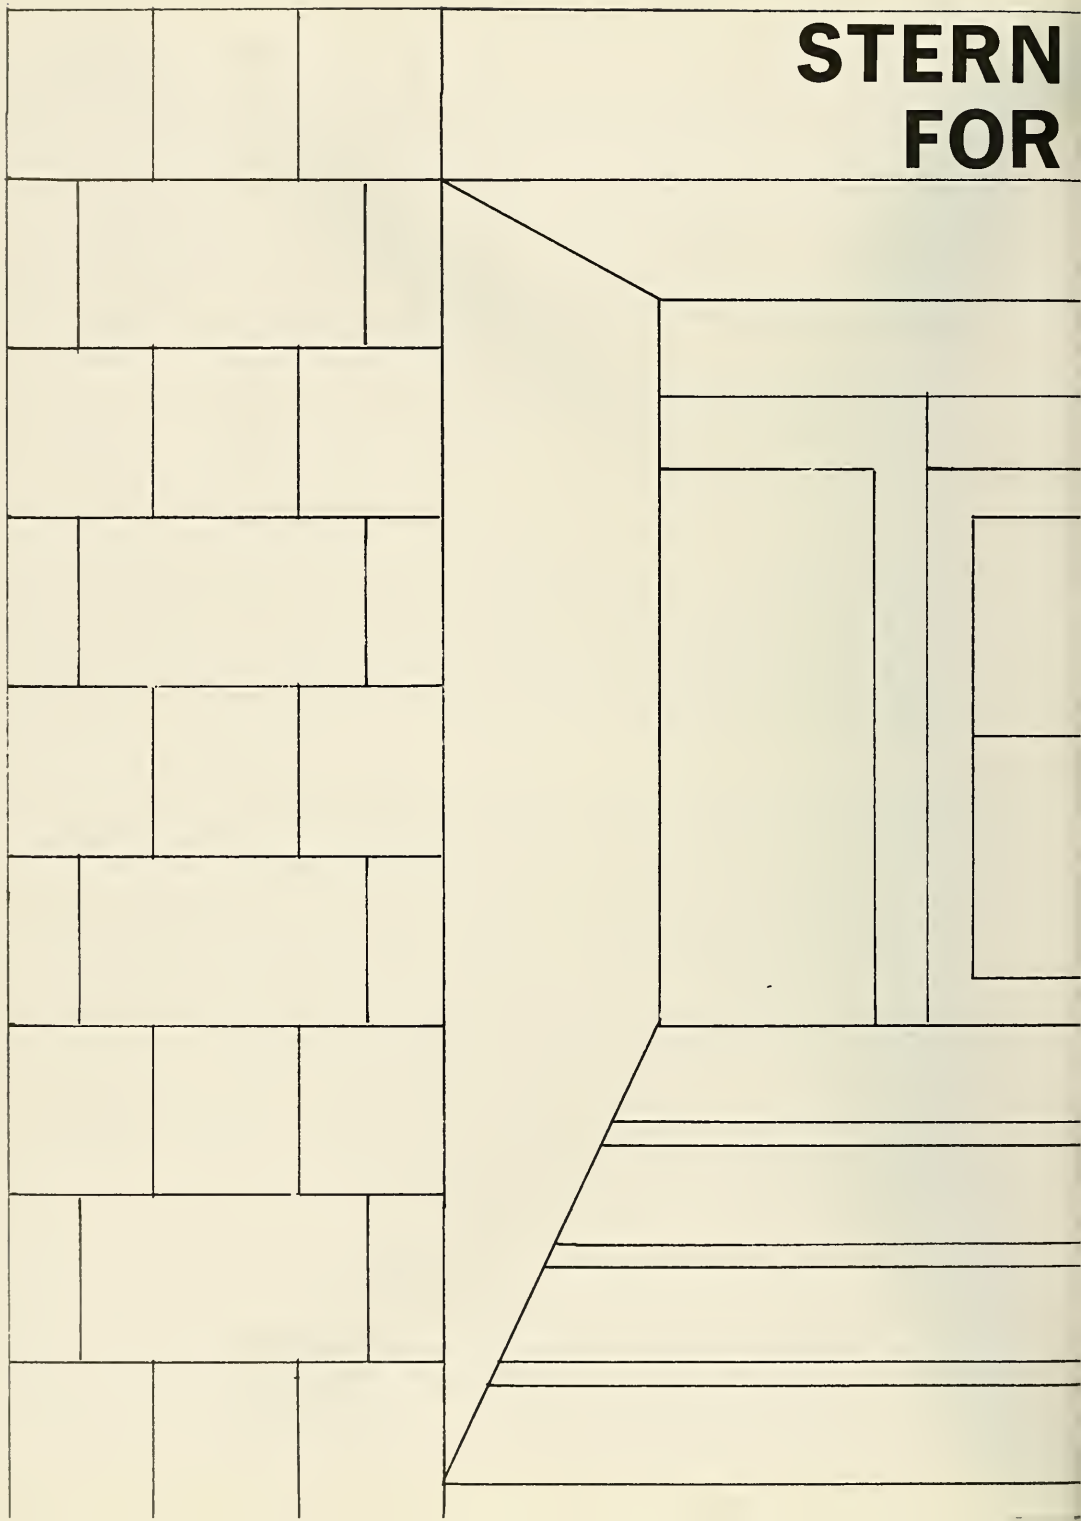

William J. Bennett, the former head of the National Endowment for Humanities and the newly appointed Secretary of Education, recently charged that many colleges "are not delivering on their promises." He even went so far as to say that "if his own child would come to him and ask him for $50,000 to go into business instead of spending it on college tuition, he would consider it very seriously." In fact, the latest report of the Association of American Colleges indicated that college curricula are in disarray and that the baccalaureate degree can be meaningless. I am happy to state that such scathing criticism does not apply to Stern College, where we are ever conscious of our aims and purposes and leave no stone unturned in our quest to make students better intellectually and morally. We feel that there is an additional dimension from which you have benefitted — our concern for each and every student and an environment of warmth and intimacy that is possible only in a college such as ours.

Armed with Jewish knowledge, and the culture of Western Civilization, and motivated by a commitment to the ideals of Torah U'MADAH, we are confident that you will make worthy contributions to both the Jewish and general communities.

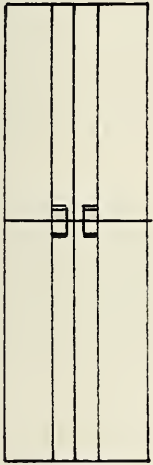

Sincerely yours,

Mrs. Esther Zuroff

An abstract geometric design featuring a grid of squares on the left and a series of perspective lines on the right. The grid is composed of squares of varying sizes, some of which are further subdivided. The perspective lines create a sense of depth, leading the eye towards the right side of the page. The overall composition is minimalist and architectural.

GAIL ROBIN HALPERN, SWEET SISTER, COME NEAR
GARNER GREAT WISDOM, A GOSPEL TO HEAR
GO FORTH, FIND FAIR FREEDOM, A WIDE WORLD TO STEER
GOLD GATEWAYS BE NARROW, THIS BRIDGE BEAR NO FEAR.

INSIDE DARK CAVES WANDER, WHILST DAY HAS BEGUN
INTENSLY THOUGH SHINING, WE SEE NOT THE SUN
INTERPRET CAST SHADOWS, REFLECT LIFE'S BLIND RUN
INSIGHT, INNER LIGHTING, THE BRIDGE THUS IS WON.

LONG VOYAGE, A DREAMLAND, THE SUN SETS, BUT STILL LADDERS SOAR SKYWARD, PERCHANCE AND UNTIL
LIGHTS BRIGHT THE NIGHT TIME, WHOLE HEARTS HOPE TO FILL
LOVE OF THE LANDSCAPE, OUR PEOPLE, THE HILL.

A LIGHT IN THE DARKNESS, FOR DARK IS THE DAY
ADVICE FROM A BROTHER, LIFE'S REAL, LEAD THE PLAY
A STAGE, A BRIDGE CROSSING, YET FEAR NOT THE WAY
ALWAYS WE LOVE YOU, LIFE'S LIGHT SHINES A RAY.

LOVE, DAD, MOM & EITAN.

Carol you are so special in the life of the young and the old,
 Always there to, lend a helping hand as a soldier so bold.
 Regardless of what exam you have the fall wing day,
 Opportunity to help out arises and you always say "OK".
 Love is an aspect that seems to pass so easy from you,

Stomachs turn because your words are as precious as jewels
 snow,

Together we have shared many good times,
 Atlantic, Pacific, over clouds and through the winter chimes,
 Magnum Opus has brought merry times during times of depression,

Living on Kasher Delight and J II, however, seem more like obsession.

Everytime we're apart it seems as though it's not clever,
 Remember, that I care and adore you forever and ever!

Love, Stuart
